Domesticated Vol. 3

by James Domestic

“Essex doesn’t just produce non-entities who act as thick as two short planks in a ‘reality show’ that gives the impression the whole county is a wasteland of tanning salons and false nail studios – It also produces people with integrity, compassion and guts who are prepared to write words and share a piece of their REAL life with you. Read these words – some might strike a chord with you. They did with me.”

Steve Ignorant - Crass, Conflict, Schwartzenegger etc.

“Words that bite, belch, and bleed in their brilliance”

Mark Grist - multi-award-winning poet and star of Channel 4’s ‘Mr Drew’s School for Boys’

“James’ poetry sharply focuses in on the raw ridiculous truth of the world that is right in front of us all.”

Scott Coe - spoken word artist & former Stamford Poet Laureate

“Through his use of clever wordplay and satire, Domestic effortlessly dissects societal norms, political landscapes, and personal dilemmas.”

Djordje Miladinović - Thoughts Words Action

“This exercises the brain, weaponizes the mind. Language gives us a way to communicate. These words start fires in the soul. Burn it all down and start all over again”

Jerry A. Lang - Poison Idea

James Domestic grew up in Clacton-on-Sea in Essex. He is a songwriter, vocalist, musician, DJ, poet, painter and punk. He holds a doctorate from the University of Essex and has toured the world with The Domestics. He’s made records with more bands than is healthy or sensible.

He enjoys sunshine and spends too much money on records. He resides in Suffolk with his partner, Lucy, and their two cats, Freddy Fuzzles and Susan the Cat, and since Domesticated Volume Two his lifestyle has not changed to the degree it should have. But he is trying, honest.
